

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A capsule medical device inserted into a body cavity has a receiving device such as an antenna and the like, for receiving data from outside the capsule medical device. This capsule medical device also comprises a non-volatile or volatile storage device in which storage data stored therein can be rewritten based on data received by the receiving device, which enables the change or the like of the setup state or operation.